Sausage Stuffed Mushrooms

1 pound hot sausage
¼ tsp. ground oregano

1 tsp. Worcestershire Sauce

Strawberries Romanov

1 quart strawberries, sliced (save few whole berries for garnish).

½ gallon French vanilla ice cream
½ cup fresh orange juice or orange liqueur
1 heaping tablespoon grated orange rind

Wash, hull and slice strawberries. Do not sweeten. Stir orange juice and orange peel into strawberries and put in refrigerator for 30 minutes to an hour, allowing them to become thoroughly chilled and absorb the orange flavor.

Remove strawberries from juice with a slotted spoon and discard juice. Mix flavored strawberries into slightly softened ice cream and put into stemmed dish.

Top with strawberry if desired. Showy and delicious.

Lemon Glazed Cake

1 package (3 ounce) dry lemon gelatin
1 package lemon velvet or lemon supreme cake mix

Two-thirds cup vegetable oil
Use amount of water called for on cake package, but use for eggs instead of two.

Grease and flour 9 X 13 X 2-inch pan. Preheat oven to 350 degrees (325 for glass pans).

Mix together the five ingredients and beat four minutes or until smooth. Bake 40 to 45 minutes or until cake springs back at light touch of finger.

Frosting:

While cake is baking, mix together 2 cups sifted powdered sugar and one-third cup lemon juice. As soon as the cake comes out of the oven, prick the top with a fork about every inch and pour the sugar-lemon juice mixture over the cake. Return it to the oven for three minutes at 350 degrees. Cool in pan on cake rack. It may be served warm or cool.

Oregon mapping second worst

Oregon is the second least mapped in the United States, according to a recent study conducted by geography professor A. Jon Kimerling.

"Large scale topographic maps are still lacking for extensive areas of the state," he said, "particularly along the coast and in south central and southeastern Oregon. These topographic maps are of special value for people in land use and resource planning, for state and federal agencies involved with land resources management, for forestry officials, hunters, fishermen and hikers."

The least mapped state in the country is Nevada.

States that first obtained complete coverage were those that had major coal, oil or mineral deposits, or were small in area.

The U.S. Geological Survey does the mapping for all states and territories. For an area to be given a high mapping priority, a state must share the cost of the map production, which explains to a large degree the lack of complete topographic mapping in Oregon.

"Large scale map coverage is complete for the Portland metropolitan area," Kimerling said, "and the western side of the Willamette Valley, a 50-mile strip along the Oregon side of the Columbia River and the Coos Bay area. The rest of the Oregon coast, a major resource area, is not fully mapped and there are also gaps in most of eastern Oregon."

About 45 percent of the state has been mapped to date with another 25 percent in process. "We have spotty coverage which is unfortunate because mapping at this scale is helpful in many ways to the agencies and people in the state," Kimerling said.

The U.S. Geological Survey expects that it will take about 10 more years to complete the topographic mapping at the standard scale of 1:24,000, or one inch to 2,000 feet.

Funding is being increased for mapping, but present and projected money shortages could further postpone completion.

"The U.S. Geological Survey is committed to completing the country at the 1:24,000 scale, but increasingly looks to the states for matching funds to accomplish the work," Kimerling noted.

He said that modern map-making has been profoundly affected by mapping satellites with sensitive and high resolution imaging capabilities, by large scale aerial photography that can be viewed stereoscopically and used to locate contours, and by digital computers that control robot-like drafting devices used in map construction.
