Hunting pamphlets available

Regulations set for deer and elk

by Ken Durbin

Printed regulations and controlled hunt application cards for 1981 deer and elk seasons are now available at license agencies throughout Oregon.

There have been a number of changes in procedure this year and hunters are encouraged to pick up a copy of the regulations as soon as possible. Instructions should be read carefully before applying for any controlled hunts.

One change this year is that the $1 application fee does not need to be submitted to the Department of Fish and Wildlife with a controlled hunt application. Instead, the fee will be paid to the license agent when the application card is obtained.

This eliminates the necessity for sending cash through the mail which has been a source of problems in the past. The application card itself will be different. Instead of spaces for two hunters to apply as a party, the new card has spaces for four.

This year it is not necessary to purchase a deer or elk tag prior to application for one of the controlled or limited entry hunts.

Hunters who are applying for a permit hunt are asked to wait until after they receive notification of success or failure before they buy a general season deer or elk tag. The tags will not go on sale until July 20.

Permits will be sent to all individuals who are successful in the controlled hunt drawing or in their bid for a limited entry tag. In another new procedure, the hunter will then take his permit to a local license agent and purchase the necesssry tag across the counter. He must have both the permit and the tag in possession when participating in the controlled or limited entry hunt.

This new procedure again eliminates the past practice of sending permit fees through the mail.

Beginning this year, all applicants for a controlled hunt will receive notification whether they are successful or not. In the past, only successful applicants were notified.

A hunter cannot have both a general season elk tag and an elk tag for a controlled hunt. Nor can he have a tag for a limited entry deer hunt as well as a general season deer tag. This is the reason hunters are being asked to delay buying their general season tag until after they receive notification of success or failure in receiving a controlled or limited entry permit.

If the hunter has purchase a general season tag and then finds he has been successful in a controlled elk or limited entry deer drawing, he can exchange his general season tag for the controlled hunt tag at the Portland office or any regional office of the Department of Fish and Wildlife.

If all this sounds complex in the telling, hunters should find it easier in practice if they read and follow the procedures spelled out in the printed regulations.

Clam diggers traveling to the coast should be aware that there are few big clams in the Clatsop Beach area.

Many of the larger clams were lot during the winter due to unknown causes.

Although there are few large clams, there is an abundance of clams measuring one to two inches. Diggers should avoid harvesting these clams since many will reach a harvestable size after this winter.

Since there are many small clams, diggers may be tempted to return them to the beach in search of larger specimens. This is not only an illegal practice, but some 80 percent of those clams will die, jeopardizing harvests of clams in the future.

Black powder shoot set

The Barlow Trail Long Rifles will hold a Black Powder Shoot as part of the annual Sandy Mountain Festival.

The shoot will be July 11-12 on the Cedar Ridge athletic field. The first events will begin at 10:15 a.m.

The competition will include a feather cut, bobcat shoot, axe and clay pigeons, card split, Hawkens shoot and quick load shoot.

A number of special events are scheduled, including a cannon shoot, rifle raffle, keg throw, costume contest and axe throw.

Prizes will be awarded, including a rifle, trophies and pistols.

Registration may be handled by mail or from 8 a.m. to noon the day of the shoot.

For more information, call Walt, 668-5651; Bill, 668-6737; or Mike, 281-9241.
