

Rabbit franks a possibility in future

Rabbit hog dogs? "Don't get out the mustard yet. But don't laugh, either," says Mephi Patton, head of Oregon State University's three-year-old Rabbit Research Center, the only public funded facility of its kind in the country. "They're making rabbit sausages and rabbit meat pies some places. We've got chicken franks and turkey franks. I guess someday... yes, we'll have rabbit franks," said Patton.

The prediction is typical of the rosy view of the rabbit's future he shares with Peter Cheeke, an animal nutritionist in OSU's Agricultural Experiment Station and animal science department who is the center's director of research.

The two say the furry little creature is going to become a major livestock species in the United States and agree that the sort of creative marketing that gave us chicken and turkey frankfurters will be part of

Spaghetti feed planned Saturday in Cottrell

Cottrell Grade School's community club will host a spaghetti dinner this Saturday, Oct. 17, to raise money to buy equipment for the school.

Spaghetti, french bread, a salad and cobbler will be on the all-you-can-eat menu. Tickets are $10 per family, $3 for adults and high school students, $2.50 for senior citizens and $1.75 for grade school students. Preschoolers will be admitted free.

The dinner will be from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. at the school at 36225 SE Proctor Rd.

The Cottrell spaghetti dinner is scheduled for Oct. 17 from 5 to 8 p.m. Some of the cooks will include, from left to right, Marlene Rattray, Linda Loomis, Debra Gentry and Velda Gillette.
