

Fraud rates jump a third

During 1981, the state of Oregon Employment Division, caught 2,484 claimants who tried to get away with $977,030 of unemployment insurance.

On top of repaying the money, these claimants lost 23,924 weeks of future benefits. This was a jump from the 1980 figures of 1,877 claimants who tried to steal $663,990 in benefits.

Ray Thorne, Employment Division administrator believes the one-third increase is due to a larger pool of people unemployed and agency reorganization to increase fraud detection.

"The actual rate of fraudulent payments detected remained at less than one-half of one percent," Thorne said.

Thorne added, "Most of the fraud occurs when we either discover persons are making a phony work search or find a job but tell us they're still unemployed."

Thorne feels that during these hard times they get used to that unemployment check and don't want to give it up. They get caught when the division computer matches employer wages against the list of people getting benefit checks.

Serious cases are prosecuted. In 1981 the Division obtained 48 convictions, in 1980 they had 49. Thorne said, "The overcrowded court systems are keeping the convictions down."
