Hood View Academy slates autumn fair

An autumn crafts and produce fair will be held this Sunday, Oct. 17, from 4:30 to 8:30 p.m. in the Hood View Junior Academy gymnasium, 26505 SE Kelso Road, Boring.

Jeneva Myers, coordinator, said there will be a Mexican-style dinner, baked goods, toys, Christmas decorations and gift items on sale, with proceeds going to overseas mission needs. Entire families of the Hood View Seventh-day Adventist congregation have been working all year on these extra-income projects for this purpose.

The church's Dorcas welfare society will also have a display of patchwork quilts, lap robes, stuffed toys and other boutique items. Proceeds from this will go toward helping local needy persons, according to Agnes Brown, director.

Plan helps kick habit

As a result of the popular interest, the Five-Day Plan to Stop Smoking will be presented at the Sandy Adventist Center, at the corner of Highway 26 and University Avenue next week, Oct. 17-21, at 7:30 p.m.

Talks, films, group discussion, a special day-to-day control pocket manual and other aides are all part of the proven techniques which make up the plan. It's friendly, informal, fun and it works. Admission is free.

Hilda Walker of Portland General Electric points to the present site of the PGE office, a grove of trees in 1946. The map in the utility's office offers an aerial view of Sandy taken 36 years ago and reminders of some old-time landmarks no longer seen in the area.

Map offers look at Sandy's past

There were no subdivisions southeast of downtown Sandy.

The current athletic fields at Sandy Elementary School and Sandy Union High School were just superintendents' dreams. In their place were groves.

In fact, in 1946 the area immediately surrounding Sandy was a forest.

While oldtimers remember those days fondly, one of the first things noticeable on an aerial photograph taken that year is the trees. The picture is now on display at the local Portland General Electric office.

The photograph turned up during the remodeling process at the local PGE office, according to district manager Bob Kallen.

The aerial map was taken for the Rural Electrification Administration which provided electricity for the area prior to PGE.

Landmarks of that era have disappeared. The pond at Cook's Mill, adjacent to Ruben Lane, is gone. The Estacada Highway no longer meanders around Tupper Road on its way south. And the number of trees has diminished as subdivisions and athletic fields have popped up.

The photo shows the right of way cleared before the power lines which pass west of the city and make their way down to the Sandy River were strung.

A dredging operation was underway at Roslyn Lake to clear sand out of the lake and make it more attractive for recreationists and fishermen.

And there were all those trees.

Cider-making on tap for Grange's finale

PUBLIC NOTICE OF FILING OF OREGON ELECTRIC RATE INCREASE APPLICATION

As a result of a substantial increase in the cost of power from the Bonneville Power Administration (BPA) effective October 1, Portland General Electric Company estimates the cost of providing service to its customers will go up an average of 1.7 percent, or about $11.2 million a year. PGE has therefore asked the Oregon Public Utility Commissioner for an overall rate increase of 1.7 percent. This would cover the costs of the BPA increase, dollar for dollar. The PGE request was filed with the PUC on September 24. If approved, the PGE increase will go into effect with meters read on and after October 28.

Rates charged PGE by the BPA have increased an average of 60 percent. This covers firm and surplus power purchases and services such as transmitting electricity and helping meet peak customer demand.

The regional power act allows PGE to buy from BPA 70 percent of the electricity used by its residential and farm customers. PGE buys the electricity at BPA's wholesale rate and sells to BPA at PGE's average cost of producing power. The savings are credited to customers' bills. Because BPA's wholesale rate increased substantially, the savings to PGE's customers are now less. Under PGE's request to the PUC, residential rates would increase an average of 5.5 percent. A bill for a customer using 1,000 kilowatt hours a month would increase $2.01. Residential and farm customers' bills, however, will still be lower than they would be if PGE did not take advantage of the exchange.

Farmers who want more information can call a special toll-free number (1-800-452-7813) established by the Public Utility Commissioner. They should ask to speak to the Consumer Assistance Division of the Office of the Public Utility Commissioner. They can also write the Public Utility Commissioner of Oregon, 300 Labor & Industries Building, Salem, Oregon 97310.

Copies of the proposed rates and related exhibits also are available for inspection at PGE's business offices. PGE employees are available to answer questions or help find particular information. PGE's business addresses and telephone numbers are listed below.

The purpose of this notice is to provide PGE customers with general information on the Company's request and its expected effect. The calculations and statements in the notice are not binding on the Public Utility Commissioner of Oregon.
