

Sandy Moonlight Sale July 7

... City-wide sale during & after Mountain Festival parade Thursday, July 7, until 10 PM

Moonlight sale again set for after parade

Sandy Area Merchants will stage their annual moonlight sale after the Mountain Festival parade Thursday night, July 7.

Official hours of this traditional citywide sale will be 8-10 p.m. Many stores will begin earlier, due to late finish of the parade, which becomes bigger and bigger each year.

Some stores will stay open later than 10 p.m. that night, too, as the annual moonlight sale throughout the streets of Sandy has become a popular event on its own.

Dozens of stores from clothing shops to craft shops will take part. Many will offer free refreshments, and all will feature specially reduced prices.

Sidewalk sales Thursday after the annual parade have become a part of this traditional moonlight sale.

This year the merchants are seeking to finance the parade through sale of refreshments during the 7 p.m. July 7 parade along Pioneer Boulevard.

More bands and commercials entries than ever before will parade before spectators lining Pioneer Boulevard this year for the 1983 Sandy Mountain Days parade.

Led by Grand Marshal Cheryl Hansen, co-host of "PM Magazine" on KGW-TV, more than 100 entries will recall "Decade on the Mountain," theme of the parade.

Marching groups will include the Royal Rosarians, two groups of mountain men—the Barlow Trail Long Rifles and the Powell Valley Long Rifles—in traditional garb and the Al Kader Shrine Flag Patrol.

Among the float entrants will be one carrying former grand marshal and television star Lindsay Wagner.

The parade will begin at 7 p.m. at the west end of town and proceed east up Pioneer Boulevard.
