

Working together important in keeping family together

A few tears were shed as Albert and Daisy Caudell reaffirmed their marriage vows in front of family and friends at the Sandy Seventh-day Adventist Church on Feb. 9.

Grandson Jim Caudell was one of those moved by Albert and Daisy's 50th wedding anniversary celebration.

In a tribute to his grandparents, Jim wrote of the brown shake house on the west end of Cherryville Drive in which the Caudells live:

"They bought their house in 1947, and every day of every year since has been spent in making it into a home, a home full of love."

Jim said Albert and Daisy built a home full of "love for another and love for God."

The couple moved into the home on Cherryville Drive 38 years ago after living in Portland during World War II. They had met a dozen years earlier at the Adventist Church, which then met in the Women's Hall in Sandy.

Daisy's family had moved to Sandy when she was 11. Albert first came to the area in 1928, "to cut wood, but we went north when the apples came in," he said.

Albert returned to the area in 1934, and his family started work in the logging industry, a trade in which several family members are still employed.

"I still have four chainsaws, but I don't get them out much anymore," said the 73-year-old Albert.

Working in the woods was a family affair, something that helped keep their marriage together, said Daisy.

"Things didn't come too easy back then, you had to work together," she said.

"With six children, you know I put in a lot of hours working," said Albert.

Time that parents could spend with their children was harder to come by in those days, but no less important, said Daisy.

"I think the fact that he took them to the woods to work with him meant a lot," said Daisy.

The lessons learned about responsibility came easier with a large family, she said. Albert said he wanted to teach them the value of work.

"I always paid them something, even if it meant borrowing to do it," he said.

The closeness that Albert and Daisy feel for their children extends to their grandchildren as well. Albert Jr. and Larry, two of their sons, own homes within blocks of the them.

"We have grandkids in the house every day," said Daisy.

There are 20 grandchildren in all. Albert Jr. and Larry work in the logging industry, as does Kenneth, of Boring.

Their second oldest son, Bill, lives in Hawaii and works for the postal service.

The Caudells also have two daughters, Nancy Cruickshank of Sandy and Darlene Douglas of Eagle Creek.

Most of the grandchildren live in the Sandy area, and Albert and Daisy said they do not plan on moving, even though the area has changed a great deal since they first came here.

...and 50 years ago.

"All you have to do is look around to see a lot worse," said Daisy.

Some things have not changed much since the days when Cherryville Drive was the main highway to Mt. Hood.

"Our kids used to lie in bed and watch the cars lined up on the way to the mountain in bad weather," said Daisy.

"Then they would put on their clothes and go out to push them out of the ditch," said Albert.

"They didn't plow the road in those days," said Albert.

In his tribute, the Caudell's grandson Jim said Albert and Daisy may be an example of something else fading from that era.

"We are in an age where having two fathers and two mothers, or living with mother during the week and visiting father on weekends, is quite common. Two people who have been married only once, and that marriage lasting 50 years, have certainly discovered and shared love," he wrote.

Albert and Daisy Caudell today.

Bill Klein will perform at the Living Way Fellowship Sunday.

Psalmist set to perform

Musician-composer Bill Klein will perform at the Living Way Fellowship Church Sunday, Feb. 24 at 10:30 a.m.

Klein has been referred to as a modern day psalmist, writing and performing his own music on the guitar and celtic harp. His unique ministry combines worship and encouragement along with a sense of the prophetic — "revealing the heart of God through song."

Living Way Fellowship is located at 17275 Strauss St. in Sandy.

Business notes

Farrell elected vp of board

Sentry Markets has reported record earnings for fiscal year 1984.

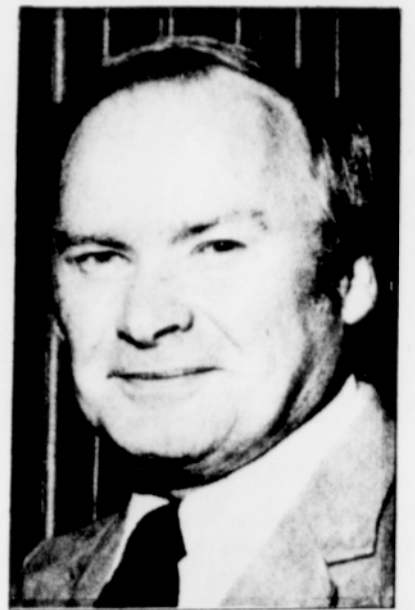

At the annual stockholders meeting, held recently at the Jantzen Beach Red Lion in Portland, Ray Nidiffer, outgoing board president, told store owners that seven new stores had joined the group in 1984 and that sales increased 15.9 percent during the year; 10.7 percent without the new store volume.

At that meeting it was announced that Tom Farrell, owner of Sandy Sentry, was elected vice president of the Sentry Corporation board of directors.

There are 47 independently-owned Sentry Markets serving Oregon, southwest Washington and northern California. The group total is expected to top 50 stores during 1985. Sentry Markets advertise collectively and utilize the buying and distribution power of United Grocers Inc., Oregon's largest wholesale grocery cooperative.

Morrison, who lives in Gresham, has served as night editor and design editor at The Barometer, OSU's student newspaper.

Amarie Curtis Baby of the Year

The Hoodland Merchants' Association held its Baby of the Year drawing at its annual meeting in January. Forty babies were registered for 1984.

Winner of a $50 savings bond — donated by U.S. National Bank Manager Geri Bell — was Jacob Waggoner, who was born Feb. 9, 1984 to Al and Cindy Waggoner.

A family will, courtesy of Attorney Lowell Njust, was awarded to Amarie Curtis. She is the daughter of Richard and Paula Curtis and was born March 12.

Each baby registered receives a packet of gifts from the Merchants' Association, sponsor of the program. Names are posted on the "stork board," which is located in the shopping mall. "New arrivals" for 1985 should be signed in by their parents at the office of Dr. Murlan Grise.

Officers for 1985 were also elected at the meeting. They are John Christensen, president; Rick Asai, vice president; Lowell Njust, secretary; and Keith Bowman, treasurer.

DENTISTRY

Some Symptoms of Gum Disease.

The major cause of adult tooth loss and other serious dental problems is avoidable gum disease, not cavities. Warning signs include redness, bleeding, a slight shininess, softening, and a "bad" taste that keeps coming back.

If you have any of them, call our office. After we've corrected the immediate problem we'll show you how to avoid further trouble and keep those teeth.
