OREGON'S EXCLUSIVE DEALER

Scientologists™ Expose IRS Crimes and Abuses

In the mid-1970s, the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) was shaken by scandal following revelations that its internal manuals contained instructions to IRS employees on how to:

- manipulate the news media;
- evade oversight by Congress and the Government Accounting Office;
- circumvent the Freedom of Information Act;
- avoid tax cases which might embarrass the IRS; and
- selectively prosecute and intimidate taxpayers.

The exposure by the Church of Scientology of more than 200 pages from these previously secret IRS manuals resulted in extensive coverage of what came to be known as "The IRS Papers" by other news media and eventually led to U.S. Congressional hearings sponsored by the late Senator Joseph Montoya (D-N.M.)

On the heels of "The IRS Papers," the IRS was rocked by disclosures that its agents engaged in illegal electronic surveillance of taxpayers, conducted harassing audits of taxpayers on a massive scale and would even drill open taxpayers' safe-deposit boxes without permission in order to get at "information" sought by the IRS.

The disclosures came in the form of an interview with IRS agent Dean Boyd, published in FREEDOM, the Church of Scientology's newspaper. The Boyd interview was to be the first of many explosive interviews with current or former IRS agents published by the Church.

Additional interviews with IRS employees published by the Church revealed to the American people that:

- criminal acts are committed by IRS employees and sanctioned by IRS management in order to attain "quotas" on collections;
- those promoted to management positions within the IRS are only those that condone or go along with the tactics of intimidation and coercion espoused by top IRS management;
- animosity between IRS employees and management is so intense that individual offices are virtual armed camps; and

• the IRS will go to virtually any length — including the commission of further illegal acts — in order to prevent the exposure of its own criminal activities.

The Church of Scientology condemns the heavy-handed, abusive and often illegal tactics used by the IRS in its attempt to gain control over individual Americans and take away their rights.

Systematically, through the years, the Church has documented how the IRS has been a major source of the erosion of our precious and hard-won freedoms.

The Church has shown that the IRS has continually managed to avoid a complete audit by either Congress or the Government Accounting Office. Any attempts to conduct such an audit have been met with vicious retaliation by the IRS against the individual or office involved.

As the Church of Scientology has repeatedly pointed out, no single agency of a democratic government can set itself "above the law." Yet the IRS has done so and considers that it is not answerable to its own government. This agency must be forced to abide by the laws of the United States just as all American citizens are expected to do.

Nationwide surveys conducted recently by the Church show that the overwhelming majority of Americans feel that the United States would be better off if the IRS were reformed or abolished altogether. The Church believes that there is no place in a free society for an agency like the IRS which uses instruments and methods of terror against its own citizens. The IRS even had an "enemies list" that included not only actor John Wayne but the Church of Scientology.

The Church of Scientology will continue to expose crimes committed by agents of the IRS, despite attempts by the IRS to silence all who would speak out against its abuses.

We will not cease our demands for bringing to justice those who have perpetrated illegal acts. We are committed to safeguarding the rights and freedoms of all people, and to a civilization without insanity, without criminality and without war.
