No Bozo about drugs

Bozo the Clown, the orange-haired jester who has entertained children for 23 years, ran for president of the United States in 1984. Now, all joking aside, he has launched a national campaign against teenage drug and alcohol abuse. Larry Harmon, beneath the make-up and the costume, became the famous TV clown during the 1950s.

You're in the army now

Not everyone reacts to a draft notice as happily as Clayton Monte, 13, of Livonia, Michigan. In fact, the high school freshman was "scared to death" until he learned the notice was sent to him by mistake.

Faces finished in time for Thanksgiving

About 100 Pilgrims celebrated that first Thanksgiving Day in 1621. Governor William Bradford of Plymouth Colony chose a day for special feasting and thanksgiving after the fall harvest.

In 1939 President Franklin D. Roosevelt declared it a national holiday. Over 360 years after the first celebration, more than 200 million Americans celebrate Thanksgiving the fourth

Thursday in November one way or another.

In Detroit, Michigan Charlie Gettel has been painting faces for characters who will march in Michigan's annual Thanksgiving Day Parade. This is the painter's 17th year as a "parade painter" and he's an expert. So far he has more than 250 faces ready to parade for some of Detroit's 1.2 million adults and children.
