Sailing down the gutter

By Peggy Bucklin

There were black clouds in the sky today
So the kids on our block went to play in the rain.
We all met at Stevie's house to discover
That Stevie McCoy had blocked up the gutter;
And all of the water that should have gone down it,
Had formed a huge lake, nearly 12 feet around it.
He'd had the bright notion that, if only we
Could block up the gutters, we'd have a lake for a street.
And on this puddle of such a grand scale,
We'd have a place to swim in and sail.
We'd build a boat, or even better, a raft
And make it a most seaworthy craft.
He'd be the captain and we'd be the crew
'Cause he knew exactly what sailors should do
So Stevie was captain with orders and shouts
And we ran the sails of the raft up and down.
We were soaking wet and laughing with joy,
Thanks to stopped up gutters and Stevie McCoy.
The only problem with all of this
Was that people in cars and street-lanes don't mix.
When Steve's dad came home and tried to drive through it,
He found that his car just could not do it.
Well, we knew right away that we were in trouble,
And had to unblock all the drains, on the double,
For the minute the car motor started to splutter,
Steve's dad yelled, "Hey! Who's the crazy that blocked up the gutter?"
We knew we'd be punished for what we had done,
But it wasn't that which made us feel glum,
It wasn't the spankings that brought so much pain,
It was watching our lake sail away.....
.....down the drain.
