

Chamber president has busy agenda

Phyllis Rader, installed as president of the Sandy Area Chamber of Commerce Saturday night at a banquet at Rippling River, has a full agenda for 1988.

A new sign ordinance, Tri-Met taxes, City Hall expansion and downtown revitalization are key issues the chamber faces in the coming year, she said.

Also at the banquet Saturday, Wasson Brothers Winery was named business of the year for its success at the Oregon State Fair, and George Hyland and Joyce Williams were honored for serving three years on the chamber board of directors.

Rader, owner of Accent Hair and Tan, 39110 Proctor Blvd., said she accepted the presidency because she knew she would get good support from people such as Dennis Dries, vice president, and Joan Miller, treasurer.

Board members for 1988 are Arnie Becker, Mike Czajka, Tom Myron, Kimberly Nelson, Scott Candland, Phil Jonsrud and Diane Tiller.

"We've got a good, hard working board," Rader added. "I can't stress that enough."

She also acknowledges that the board has a lot of hard work in front of it. Proposed changes in the sign ordinance are about to be reviewed. Sandy has the option of dropping out of the Tri-Met taxing district. The City Council is considering options for expanding City Hall, and the vacancy rate downtown has been a cause of concern.

But Rader hopes to address those issues in a couple of ways. One is through a monthly noon forum, held on Tuesdays at T.J.'s Restaurant. The chamber hosts a speaker each week, but now will hold a forum once a month to discuss issues of local significance.

Rader is also forming an advisory committee, which will include some longtime residents and some newcomers.

"We need those old-timers to tell us what has worked in the past, but we also need those new people with fresh ideas," she said.

Rader will take the best ideas generated by the advisory committee to the chamber membership.

Rader herself has a long history of involvement in community activities. She and her husband, Carroll, own the Rader building and the Frontier Building in downtown Sandy. She has operated a hair styling salon in Sandy since 1952.

A few years ago Rader signed up a number of businesses to participate in the Block Home program. Block Homes, marked by distinctive yellow signs, provide a refuge for children who think they might be in danger.

Rader, who said she believes strongly in the program, signed up dozens of business people.

In fact, she worries that she went overboard. "I kind of felt like I got in there and said, 'I want to do this. Get out of my way.'"

But people who have worked at the Wine Fair and Feast during Mountain Festival or for the Sandy Community Players probably appreciate that can-do spirit.

During SCP's production of "Annie," Rader worked nearly every night for six weeks doing hairstyles or preparing wigs for the performers. Working at the Wine Fair and Feast and for SCP nearly wore her out, but she said it was a lot of fun and both events contribute greatly to the success of Mountain Festival.

Rader is also a member of the Sandy Job Club board, and helped organize the Sandy Junior Miss program last year.

Away from work and community activities, Rader does carpentry work on a doll house. The house is so intricate that it will have tiny plug-ins for the miniature lamps.

She has an extensive doll collection, and enjoys collecting antiques of all kinds. "If we had room in the house, we'd still be going to antique auctions and buying things," she joked.

Rader grew up in Sandy, attending school in the Sandy Elementary District and graduating from Sandy High School.

She lived in Anaheim, Calif., a few years, but is happy to call Sandy home.

She has three grown daughters, and five grandchildren.

About her presidency, she said, "I'm anxious to see what we can get accomplished."

She said she expects a good working relationship with the Sandy City Council.

with changing students' attitudes.

Good students understand that they are responsible for their own success or failure, Heaton explained, but people who are not successful tend to blame their parents, teachers and society for their failures.

After leaving Clackamas Community College, Heaton served for two years as assistant superintendent at a 7,500-student district in Idaho.

Heaton makes no secret of his plans in Sandy. First, he wants to earn the public's trust by offering a good but affordable program. Then he wants a tax base.

"We're going to do everything to hold the line, but I want to ask the public for a tax base of $5.9 million (the school's current budget). My reasoning is this. I have creeping costs every year, you know?"

Heaton said there is an unexpected, increased expense every year, whether for sewer and water service or building inspections.

"We don't intend to use the full 6 percent every year, but we have to have a way to operate down the road."

Heaton said a good budget committee can assure the public that the budget increases will be justified.

"This community deserves good schools," Heaton said. "We have to stay on the cutting edge."

It is a complex world, one in which it is not easy for students to predict where the jobs might be, Heaton said. Society has changed, and it might be harder now to be a high school student. But some things have not changed.

"Kids today are just as good or just as bad as they've always been," Heaton said. "I prefer to see them as just as good."

IN THE MILITARY

Charles Taylor

Charles M. Taylor, son of Charles and Ann Taylor of Sandy, has enlisted in the U.S. Army under provisions of the delayed entry program. He will leave for eight weeks of basic training at Fort Knox, Ky., on Sept. 14, 1988.

Upon completion of basic, he will remain at Fort Knox to attend advanced individual training in the armor field.

The delayed entry program allows high school seniors such as Taylor to select the job training they desire and qualify for and have that training reserved for up to one full year while they finished school.

Taylor is a senior at Sandy High School and will graduate in June.

Elizabeth Mancino

Elizabeth C. Mancino, daughter of Donna Mancino of Sandy, has been promoted in the U.S. Army to the rank of private first class.

Mancino is a motor transport operator in West German with the 51st Transportation Company.

She is a 1986 graduate of Sandy High School.

security will be selling points, he said.

The Salmon River flows through the park, but there are no camp sites on the river. And the wetlands remain undisturbed.

"It will be left just as nature intended," Hegstrom said. "It will be untouched."

Beaver dams, deer and the unspoiled beauty of the area will be among the park's features, Hegstrom said.

The development of the park is ongoing. The RV maintenance center could be leased out, and plans for a restaurant have been considered. A museum could also be built for the Cascade Geographic Society. But for now Hegstrom said they plan to promote the many activities they will have to offer this spring.

Entrance to the park could become an area landmark. R.V. Village has ordered four totem poles, two of which will be placed on either side of Highway 26. Two others will be placed on either side of the entrance to R.V. Village.

Hegstrom has worked with Michael P. Jones of the Cascade Geographic Society to arrange for the totem poles to be carved. Hegstrom has seen the poles and was pleased. They will be on display at Lewis and Clark College in February, and will be put up in July. R.V. Village plans to hold its grand opening during the pole-setting ceremonies.

Each of the totem poles tells a story, Hegstrom said. They will serve as an entrance to the Hoodland recreation area.

Hegstrom said R.V. Village will provide 35 to 40 jobs, and he said he feels the tourism industry is coming of age in Oregon and on Mount Hood.

Hegstrom has joined the Mount Hood Recreation Association and the Hoodland Area Chamber of Commerce.

"I haven't been anywhere where there is more enthusiasm and unity than there is here," he said.
