four hours cutting through it with a variety of tools. "There were just a lot of women conversing with the cops, explaining why we were here. Really being verbally confrontational about it," said Meredith Crafton, her hands bloody from untying the fence wire. "That felt really powerful to me. You don't see the front having space with just women and a conversation happening, which was really beautiful."

In the end, the fence was torn down. Again,

The demonstrators remained largely committed to pacifism, and the Mexican police showed restraint. Still, the delegates inside the WTO ministerial heard the message loud and clear: The people of the world will not remain silent while their livelihoods are sold to corporations.

"Voices of dissent, even in Cancún, must be also listened to," the Hon. Peter Kyalo Kaindi of the Kenyan Parliament told me inside the NGO forum. "When people demonstrate, it is not the fires. They are only sending signals that something is not right."

protesters decided not to go through it. "Basically, the purpose was to do a symbolic, pacifist gesture of tearing down the WTO and letting them know that they can't build walls to keep us out," said Crafton. "I think just seeing that can give you a sense of joy. You know, 'the people united cannot be defeated,' as we chanted over and over in several languages. And that was a cause for celebration."

In the week of protests, very few people were hurt or arrested. The only death was the suicide of South Korean farmer and lawmaker Lee Kyung Hae, who martyred himself on Sept. 10 as an act of protest. He'd climbed the police barricade holding a sign that read "WTO Kills Farmers," and plunged a Swiss army knife into his heart.

Fissures in world trade negotiations were not confined to the outside. Within the Convention Center itself, a group of 23 nations from the global South — representing over half of humanity — refused to accept trade accords that would mire their nations in deeper poverty. On Sunday, Sept. 14, the negotiations collapsed. The WTO's fifth ministerial had failed.

It was a victory for the thousands of activists who had journeyed to Cancún to oppose the WTO. And it was a sweet relief for me — filthy, exhausted, and sick of quesadillas — to return home to tranquil Eugene savoring the taste of freedom. EW
