

WHAT'S happening

The Oregon Festival of American Music presents The Dan Tepfer Trio at the Shedd Chapel. Tepfer studied classical piano performance at the Paris Conservatoire and is now working toward a master's degree in jazz piano performance at the New England Conservatory. His trio plays original compositions and new arrangements of jazz standards, emphasizing improvisational freedom. See Friday Calendar.

It's said that Arthur Miller's Pulitzer Prize-winning Death of a Salesman is performed every night somewhere in the world. This week brings it to Eugene, as produced by the Very Little Theatre. See Friday Calendar.

Anne Wilson's (work pictured above) installation at the 2002 Whitney Biennial was a vast white tablecloth dotted with tiny fragments of black lace, addressing concepts of cartography, domestic linens and space/time. Wilson's evocative installations and interactive websites have earned her multiple National Endowment for the Arts grants, and her work is in several permanent collections, including that of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York. Wilson will give a lecture at the UO. See Thursday, Jan. 13 Calendar.

Eugene has no shortage of events to celebrate the birthday of Martin Luther King Jr. Popular hip hop poet/actor/spoken word artist Saul Williams (right) performs Thursday, Jan. 13 at the EMU. On Monday at the same location author and journalist Bebe Moore Campbell will speak at the Martin Luther King, Jr. Celebration of Lane County. Also on Monday the Temple Beth Israel promises an action-packed two hours of music, dancing, arts, crafts and family fun. Springfield Middle School's Student Contest and Celebration will feature a student art reception, speakers, and performances – or you could throw in your hat with the Northwest Youth Corps, who invite the public to join them in volunteering at senior centers Monday morning. See Calendar.
