Through 15 years as an NBA player, Clyde Drexler was a model for the perfect professional athlete. Playing the game with elegance, flair, leadership and integrity, Drexler twice led the Portland Trail Blazers to the NBA Finals, and was a key factor in the Houston Rockets winning their second NBA title in 1995. Drexler was a 10-time All-Star, member of the 1992 Olympic Dream Team, and a 2004 inductee into the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame.

Note from the editor:

Thanks for checking out Eugene Weekly's quarterly publication devoted just to Corvallis. We'd like to thank all of our advertisers, Victoria Fridley of ArtCentric, our fabulous Corvallis-based freelancers Alana Yankus, Brian Page, Kim Smith and Rob Gándara, and the community at large. We hope to continue to expand our coverage of Corvallis arts, entertainment and news. If you've got a hot tip or a story you think we should write, contact Melissa Bearns by e-mailing melissa@eugeneweekly.com. If you want to run an ad in this section, contact Bill Shreve: bills@eugeneweekly.com.
Enjoy!
