LONGEVITY, we've got it at Eugene Weekly. Our writers have been filling the culture gap in the Willamette Valley for nearly twenty five years. That's longer than the life span of an average Egyptian during the time of the Pharaohs. How cool is that? In dog years, Eugene Weekly is 175 years old! Can you believe it? If you were a Golden Retriever, you could have spend almost the last two centuries of your life slobbering us. Pretty amazing, right? So we've had a quarter century to get to know this little corner of the Northwest, and we're pretty happy about it. We'd even consider each one of your our personal friends. We'd be proud to take you home to meet our mother, except that newspapers rarely, if ever, have a biological mother. It's just that newsprint is surprisingly sterile. Just try to make little baby EWs with those back issues you're keeping in your magazine rack; it won't happen. Enough rambling, I just want to say, in the words of the Rev. Al Green, let's stay together.
