

"Ballerina" by Raymond Hunter was installed in 1979 at Madison Avenue and 7th Street along Central Park. It was the first public artwork placed along Madison Avenue.

Off the Beaten Path

Alley Art: Corvallis' own outdoor art show STORY KIM SMITH • PHOTOS BY MELISSA BEARNS

The rescued marquee from the Midway Drive-In Theater now displays poems from local writers. Produced by Endex Engineering, the prose are constantly changing. You can read the latest work at Madison Avenue and First Street.

(Pictured right) "Clever Disguise" by Peter Helzer. A play on the classic poster, "Expose yourself to art," of former Portland Mayor Bud Clark flashing a statue. From the back, "Clever Disguise" looks like a man wearing a trench coat. Find it next to Central Park near Madison Avenue and 7th Street.

