Caring for your most important tools

Hands. They are simply our most important tools.

Jason Tavakolian, M.D., our newest physician, understands how difficult it can be to function when hands hurt. "Whether it's a degenerative condition or an accident, life becomes difficult if you can't use your hands."

As an orthopedic surgeon, Dr. Tavakolian specializes in complex problems of the hands and elbows. After residency training at the Harvard Combined Orthopaedics Program, he completed a Hand and Microvascular Surgery Fellowship at the Curtis National Hand Center in Baltimore, Md.

Dr. Tavakolian is currently accepting patients. He'll help you take care of your most important tools.

Dr. Jason D. Tavakolian

A craftsman respects his work and his tools. By being meticulous about safety, he avoids injury while creating beautiful results.
