

In a New York Times column June 24, Frank Rich reported that the Iraq civilian casualty rate is at an all-time high, and the April-May American death toll is a new two-month record. He also said overall violence in Iraq is up, only 146 out of 457 Baghdad neighborhoods are secure and the number of internally displaced Iraqis has quadrupled since January. "Last week Iraq rose to No. 2 in Foreign Policy magazine's Failed State Index, barely nosing out Sudan," he wrote. "It might have made No. 1 if the Iraqi health ministry had not stopped providing a count of civilian casualties. Or if the Pentagon were not withholding statistics on the increase of attacks on the Green Zone."
