

SUNDANCE NATURAL FOODS at 24th Ave. and Hilyard St.

A lot of people are probably wondering why Sundance has covered up the mural on the west side of their grocery. This big, thick white board? That's extra insulation to keep the concrete wall from overheating and causing the freezers inside to short circuit, says a source at Sundance. So the earlier mural is lost to the machinations of running a business, but a new one will soon take its place. The grocery is currently taking proposals for this big, blank white space on the insulation board. Got some good ideas? Share 'em with Gavin McComas.

The City of Eugene wants to:

- * give $40 million of your tax money to a Portland developer
- * bulldoze most of the buildings in West Broadway's nightlife/arts district
- * displace all 25 local businesses and non-profits
- * tear down two historic buildings
- * create an upscale shopping mall -- with public money

Do you think this sounds bad?
