HELLO! my name is

Chi Spa

Located in the Coburg Station shopping center on Coburg Road, Chi Spa offers Chinese massage and detox therapies.

Inside Chi Spa, a licensed massage therapist is placing a customer's feet into a wide soaking pail of hot water. Infused with rose petals, pre-mixed ocean minerals and Chinese herbs, the herbal liquid soothes the woman and cleanses and softens her feet in preparation for the Chinese foot reflexology therapy, or foot massage.

A second therapist has just finished on another customer, who appears relaxed and ready to continue her day with renewed vigor. Before she arrived, the customer says her "whole back was tense." After the Chi Spa practitioner massaged her lower legs, toes and soles of the feet, the customer says she felt the tightness disappear.

In Chinese foot reflexology, the practitioner applies specific kinds of pressure and kneading with their hands to reflex points on the foot that invigorates and even heals or soothes the corresponding body parts. This healing art isn't commonly practiced in the Eugene-Springfield area. The foot reflexology chart at Chi Spa shows that the ball of the foot is associated with the thyroid, for example, while the area directly below the second and third toes is connected to the eyes, and the arch of the foot to the bladder, and so on.

Among its universal benefits is a noticeable reduction in stress and an improvement in circulation, says Bryan Wong, owner of Chi Spa. "Foot reflexology is a very old practice, based on ancient principles in Chinese medicine," Bryan Wong explains. Almost any person can benefit from massage, he says, including "young children, athletes and seniors."

Customers can book Chi Spa services online, call-in or book at the spa. In addition to Chinese foot reflexology and full-body Chinese massage customers can make appointments for detox therapies. Chi Spa has private Far-Infrared Ray Saunas and Ionic Detox Foot Spa, which Bryan Wong says flushes toxins from the body. If time is short, a customer can purchase a 15-minute foot spa with ocean minerals and rose petals.
