Due to recent events, the word "marathon" is now associated with far worse things than sweat-soaked joggers. But let's look on the bright side here: The weather is finally turning around; flowers have bloomed; and, judging by the campus area, it seems like leggings are in style and here to stay.

Tight, shapely spandex is appropriate attire, I suppose, if running is your bag, and for those attempting to complete the Eugene Marathon this week, it better be. Kicking off early on Sunday morning, the 26.2 mile race spans Eugene and surrounding areas, with runners following a course past several local landmarks, including Alton Baker Park, Owen Rose Garden and Skinner Butte. Fingers crossed for a sunny day. And for those still jittery after the crisis in Boston, Eugene Marathon officials had this to say: "With the Boston tragedy still fresh in our hearts and minds, we want to reassure participants, volunteers and spectators that we have been working closely with local and national law enforcement officials to ensure the safety of everyone."

The Eugene Marathon starts 7am Sunday, April 28, at Hayward Field; register to run at eugenemarathon.com
