Cleopatra has been waiting over a year now for what is likely to be her first family. Last summer she was found living outdoors on her own. When she arrived at the shelter on 1st Avenue her one-year-old body was covered in scabs.

She is so young that only time can tell if her skin will be troublesome in the future. Proper care has since healed her body, but Cleopatra's mind remains scarred by fear. When people are about, she hides. As small and painfully shy as she is, she goes unnoticed by most visitors to the shelter. She welcomes the companionship that her fellow felines provide, that is until they're adopted. She watches from her hide-box while the others come and go. It's always Cleopatra that's left behind.

Pets like Cleopatra need you now. Consider becoming a living example of kindness at it's best; become a foster. Visit www.green-hill.org to learn how.
