There's not really much that qualifies Olympic runner Nick Symmonds to write an autobiography and expect people to care, unless we're underestimating the fan-girl capacity of run-or-die track junkies (many of whom call Eugene home). In any case, one of the selling points first mentioned on the sleeve of Symmonds' tell-all is that he "talks about dating Paris Hilton" which, along with the author's so-called "contentious" relationship with Nike and strong feelings of perceived injustice about certain track and field regulations, end up making his book rather tempting after all. Symmonds will be signing copies of Life Outside the Oval Office: the Track Less Traveled at 7:45pm Friday, Oct. 17, at the City Hall Fountain Plaza in Springfield. And in case an autobiography book tour signing weren't masturbatory enough, the event is intentionally scheduled to begin just after the running of the 3rd Annual Nick Symmonds 800.
