

In a place as rich in natural beauty as Eugene, it isn't surprising that many local artists create work reflecting the natural world. Painter Erika Beyer and fiber artist Robin Seloover are no exceptions to this trend; their new exhibit at Lane Community College, titled "Structure/Sequence," showcases work that depicts nature with varying degrees of imagination and scientific accuracy. While Beyer says she relies on "academic journals, folklore and mythology, and conversations with scientists" as part of her design process, Seloover's art is much more interpretive. "These pieces are explorations in texture, line and form," Seloover says. Both she and Beyer are also faculty in the Department of Art and Applied Design at LCC.

"Structure/Sequence" runs Nov. 17 – Dec. 10 at Lane Community College Art Gallery; admission is FREE. — Isabel Zacharias
