Indie music, indie films — Oregon loves independent culture. Now, joining the scene is indie gaming. The second annual Indie Game Play Test Night at Shoryuken League is produced by Bitforest, a local nonprofit focused on the local video game community in Eugene. Indie Game Test Night allows gaming enthusiasts to test-play games from Portland and Eugene developers — participate in tournaments, give your feedback to programmers, win prizes and earn bragging rights to beating a game before it's even released. "Last time we had this event we had 100 people show up and about 10 games from Portland and Eugene," says Britt Brady of Bitforest. "This time we are expecting an even larger turn out." Bitforest is also warming up for Indie Game Con Oct. 2 and 3 at LCC's downtown campus, where Brady says: "We will be back and bigger than ever with lots of games, an art show and an after party."

Indie Game Test Night begins 6pm Wednesday, Aug. 12, at Shoryuken League, 881 Willamette St.; FREE
