Look deep into my eyes and you'll find it's no Mystery that I love my people. They only need to give me catnip, wet food and lots of together time and we'll be bonded forever. Writer's block? No problem, my stroll across your keyboard will help your creative juices flow.

A house rabbit may sound like a special breed of bunny, but any rabbit can share your home. Because of their tidy nature, rabbits can be trained to use litter boxes. Belle enjoys two wood pellet and hay-filled litterboxes — one for eliminating and the other for lounging and snacking. Purebred, miniature Rex, Belle, will gladly room with you provided you provide her with boxes scattered throughout her range in the house. Watching your house rabbit hop and kick high into the air while racing through your living room will be your new, favorite pastime. At just 9 months old, Belle has enough energy to entertain you for hours. See all of Greenhill Humane Society's small animals' profiles at www.Green-Hill.org

Rescued Cat of the Week

Raspberry, Papaya, Cantaloupe, and Marionberry are five week-old siblings with their whole lives ahead of them. Playing together ferociously but lovingly like only bonded siblings can, they must go home in pairs to keep each other sane (and also the people they live with). Especially at this age, it is absolutely essential to remember that adopting is a life commitment. With a kitten curiosity, these tykes create toys out of everything and napping lounges in the most unassuming places. Their thirsty imaginations are such a vast universe! Stroll into S.A.R.A.'s Treasures to witness extreme cuteness at its finest and meet the fruit babies!
