

"The NSA has built an infrastructure that allows it to intercept almost everything," says National Security Agency whistleblower Edward Snowden in Ted Rall's graphic novel Snowden. "With this capability," Snowden continues, "the vast majority of human communications are automatically ingested without targeting." Rall, the editorial cartoonist for The Los Angeles Times, tells a terrifying true story of overweening government secrecy, control and spying, and how one man — a former Boy Scout and tech worker — took massive personal risk to expose just how badly the U.S. surveillance apparatus shreds the Constitution by peeking into every nook and cranny of our lives. Using George Orwell's classic dystopian novel 1984 as a yardstick, Rall paints a picture, literally, of one man's battle against government control run amok, leaning heavily on good, old investigative journalism — facts, quotes, personal anecdotes. The result is a chilling vision of our government that makes Orwell's notion of totalitarianism look tawdry and inefficient.

Ted Rall gives an illustrated talk about his latest book Snowden at 2pm Saturday, Oct. 3, at the Eugene Public Library, 100 W. 10th Ave.; FREE. — Rick Levin
