According to author and 350.org activist Bill McKibben in his endorsement of writer Meera Subramanian's first book, "What happens in India may turn out — even more than China — to be the key to the kind of environmental future the planet faces." Subramanian lived for 10 years outside Cottage Grove, working at Aprovecho Sustainability Education Center. She left to earn her graduate degree in journalism from New York University, to travel to India, the land of her father, and to write her narrative nonfiction book. Subramanian's returning to Oregon for a visit while on a tour for her A River Runs Again: India's Natural World in Crisis, from the Barren Cliffs of Rajasthan to the Farmlands of Karnataka (Public Affairs Books, $26.99). Subramanian tells EW that River is framed around the five elements and is linked to the work she did at Aprovecho, for example "exploring organic agriculture (earth), small-scale water restoration (water) and fuel-efficient wood cookstoves (fire)."

Subramanian speaks about A River Runs Again, 4pm Thursday, Oct. 29, at Straub Hall, Rm 145 at the UO. She will also be discussing her book 7pm Sunday, Nov. 1, at the Axe and Fiddle, 657 E Main St., Cottage Grove. Both events are free and open to the public. — Camilla Mortensen
