

KUN FUSION'S ROVING NATURE DOESN'T DISSUADE THE TRUCK'S FOLLOWERS — AT LUNCHTIME, WERNER SAYS, UP TO 50 PEOPLE MIGHT WAIT FOR A QUESADILLA OR KYRO, WERNER'S TANGY, KOREAN-INFLUENCED TAKE ON A GYRO.

Werner says he gets most of his ingredients from Asian markets in Portland, and he travels there once a week to ensure all the food Kun Fusion uses is fresh.

If you're wondering where the name came from, Werner has two answers for you: "It's confusing to have Korean food in a burrito," and secondly, "it's a reference to Domo-kun," a well-known Japanese cartoon monster with a wide-open mouth — the toothy, anthropomorphic burritos, tacos and quesadillas that decorate the Kun Fusion truck are meant to pay tribute to the character.

Werner credits local designers Nasty Works for the food truck's design, adding that the entire food truck experience has been a team effort.

"It's never been just me," he says. "Kun Fusion wouldn't be the way it is without all the people who helped make it happen." ■

Kun Fusion Grill is open 11 am to 2 pm Tuesdays and Fridays; follow on Facebook, Twitter or the Eugene Street Food app for locations.
