The Northwest Youth Corps will host a screening of An American Ascent, the story of the first team of African-American climbers who took on America's highest mountain. Scott Briscoe, who was part of the team of nine climbers in 2013, will be hosting a question and answer session about the film and the journey to Denali. The proceeds earned from the film will go to the Northwest Youth Corps gear scholarship fund, which provides equipment and outdoor gear used for NYC programs for in need, says Natalie Whitson with NYC. She says the film was chosen to help encourage more kids to get outdoors "We're trying to highlight people of color or youth who are not used to seeing themselves out in nature," Whitson says. Food carts and beer will be available for purchase at the event and that money will go towards the scholarship fund as well.

An American Ascent begins at 6:30 pm on Wednesday, Nov. 2, at the Northwest Youth Corps, 2621 Augusta St. $5-$6. — Corinne Boyer
