It's a first-time win for Hi-Fi owners Danny Kime and Mike Hergenreter, who opened the music hall in 2015. The 700-capacity venue basks in popularity because it filled a niche at the perfect moment, according to publicist Doug Fuchs. "The economy and the community can support two venues in one, Hi-Fi Main Hall and Hi-Fi Lounge," he says. "It's a combination that allows for a wide variety of concerts and events every week. The owners understand the community and have a lot of experience booking bands into this market and running a bar in this market." From indie rock to metal to Grateful Dead jams, the concert schedule is varied enough to appeal to all music enthusiasts.
