According to Travis McKenzie, one of the owners of TJ Organic Provisions, “a gift of flowers is always a good thing.” If you or your loved one needs a little extra help getting in the holiday spirit, you’re in luck that 2016 ushered in the use of recreational edibles in Oregon. For cannabis noobs, McKenzie recommends a Willamette Valley Gummy at a 15-milligram dose, or Carnivores caramels. He also suggests Durban Poison as a good gift nugget for the holidays. Durban Poison is what you could call a diet weed: Its THCv curbs the appetite and has an energetic, almost coffee-like buzz. Turning down cookies and getting work done while enjoying a relaxed holiday feeling? Groovy. Durban Poison runs $12 a gram before tax.

Twenty-five different glassblowing artists can be found at Cornerstone Glass at 446 E. 13th Avenue, 541-844-1585. Each has a special twist on the traditional pipe and with prices ranging from $6 to more than $100, the perfect pipe to unwind will be found.

A hand-carved yew wood Nug Jar is the perfect addition to the collection of a cannabis connoisseur. Starting at $80 at Mona Beads, 1712 Willamette Street, this hippie humidior helps to keep weed fresh and uncontaminated as well as classy.

Mycobacterium vaccae is a probiotic found in soil that is thought to have the same antidepressant qualities as Prozac. Keep your loved one happy all year long by keeping their hands in the dirt. Johnson Brothers Garden Market at 91444 Coburg Road has the perfect gift to make sure hands get nice and filthy at least once a month. Their plant-of-the-month club will hook your giftee up with the perfect plant surprise every month. Members are encourage to pick up their newest addition the first Thursday of the month from 4 to 6 pm, where they can rub elbows with other gardeners, or they can call to schedule a pick up time. The plant of the month is $80 for six months or $150 for 12 months. It’s a small price to pay to give the gift of happiness all year long.
