Truffles are a treasure here in the Pacific Northwest and dogs, I would like to argue, are a treasure world wide. Come enjoy both of those wonders at The Joriad North American Truffle Dog Championship. The fourth annual competition takes place this year on Thursday, Jan. 25, a day before the Oregon Truffle Festival kicks off, which takes place on Jan. 26-28 in Eugene and the surrounding area. Competitor registration is full, so unfortunately it's too late to register your pup, but the public is welcome to come watch talented truffle-hunting dogs. The event "begins in the morning with a series of qualifying events where spectators can cheer on the teams as they race to search for hidden truffle-scented targets," according to the Oregon Truffle Festival's website. Then, at the end of the events, finalists will be announced. There will then be a field trial in the afternoon, not open to the public, in which the finalists will go out into nature and attempt to find the real deal. Check out more Oregon Truffle Festival events happening this month and next at oregontrufflefestival.org. The Joriad North American Truffle Dog Championship is 9 am to noon on Thursday, Jan. 25, at the Lane County Fairgrounds Large Animal Arena (796 W. 13th Avenue). It's $12 in advance and $15 at the door. — Meerah Powell
