Developing orchestral chops is almost like Jedi training. You have to start young no matter what your musical skills are — kind of like how although Anakin Skywalker had more midi-chlorian levels than any Jedi ever, Yoda still didn't want to train him because he was too old. Luckily, Eugene-Springfield Youth Orchestra has been around for 85 years to help the youth be prepared for the music world. The organization kicks off its 85th season with a two-night season opener. The first night will feature their Little Symphony string ensemble and the Junior Orchestra. The next night, the Eugene-Springfield Youth Symphony will perform a program of well-heard classical music. You can expect George Gershwin's American in Paris, Georges Bizet's L'Arlesienne No. 2 and the first movement of Alexander Borodin's Symphony No. 2 — as well as other works.

Eugene-Springfield Youth Orchestras opens its 85th season 7:30 pm Tuesday, Dec. 11 and Wednesday, Dec. 12. The concerts take place at South Eugene High School, 400 E. 19th Avenue. Tickets are free for children under 12, $5 for students and $10 for adults. — Henry Houston
