SAVAGE LOVE

Quickies BY DAN SAVAGE

My boyfriend and I have not had sex for more than two years. When I first asked him about it, he hemmed and hawed. When I pressed him, he said he doesn't have any interest. I felt like he was not telling me the whole truth. When I suggested he tell his doctor, my boyfriend said he could not do that because his doctor is an old family friend. He won't go to another doctor. I don't know what to do. Staying in a long-term relationship without sex does not appeal to me. But I love him, so leaving him is not an option. On all other levels we have a great relationship. But I miss his cock and I miss intimacy. I have tried many things, but I am sick and tired of being refused. He will remove my hand from his cock if I touch it, and he does not seem to ever get hard anymore. I used to think that it was my fault but no longer accept the blame. What can I do?

— Unhappy Not Having Any Penetration Play In Literally Years

If you're going to rule out leaving, UNHAPPILY, your options are staying and enduring a sexless existence or staying and having sex with other people. If you don't wanna be accused of cheating, you'll have to ask your boyfriend's permission to seek sex elsewhere. If you don't wanna ask his permission or you ask and don't get it, well, then you'll either have to endure a sexless existence or discreetly fuck other people when you have the chance. (I hesitate to describe that as cheating in a case like yours, UNHAPPILY, since you wouldn't be cheating your boyfriend out of anything he seems to want.)

I'm a 65-year-old gay man and over the past few years, I've completely lost interest in having sex with other men. Coincidentally, pleasure from the prostate has gone to a whole new level. I am now having the most intense and powerful prostate-induced orgasms one could ask for—like joining the universe intense. Do I need to see a therapist?

— My Orgasms Are Now Sensational

Only if you're unhappy, MOANS, and you don't sound unhappy to me. (And if you were, you might be better off seeing a sex worker.)

I broke up with my boyfriend about one month ago after almost a year together. I'm 22 and he's 20, and we met at work. A month after we started dating, his mom died. He is a jealous and controlling person, whereas I'm a very friendly and outgoing person, and he didn't like it that I had friends. He was constantly worried I was cheating on him, and I would reassure him as best I could. I tried to be understanding because, again, his mom had just died. But nothing helped. A month ago, he starts yelling that he now knows for sure I had cheated on him at least three times, even if he doesn't have any proof. (I never cheated on him.) So, I broke it off. But he continues to send me dozens of abusive text messages every day. At the same time, he makes excuses to see me. Two weeks ago, he came over to get his phone charger, which was not here. Today, he came demanding a sweatshirt, which I do not have. Between these surprise visits he sends text messages saying he would be happy if something terrible happened to me. What should I do? Blocking him isn't an option, as we continue to work together, and must communicate for work-related reasons.

— Pushy Ex Abusing Confused Ex

Get him fired, PEACE. Show his text messages to your boss or to HR, and demand they do something about the hostile work environment he's created for you, i.e., tell your bosses you expect them to fire him. If your employer won't fire your ex, PEACE, talk to a lawyer about suing your employer and, if you must, seek employment elsewhere. I'm sorry this is being done to you, PEACE, and in the future... a controlling, possessive piece of shit who "constantly worries" you're cheating on him needs to be dumped immediately. Because those sorts of "worries" always—always—become angry and sometimes violent accusations in the end.
