Your Good Deed For The Day

Boy Scouts have "their good deed for the day" to perform—that is, if they are good Boy Scouts.

Every resident of this area should have his or her good deed for the day to perform—and first, in the way the Pilot thinks, is honest advertising, to friends, the area in southwest Oregon.

Picked up by United Press were stories about the re-birth of the area once a lumber milling town of note, due to lilies—although this United Press article mentioned lumbering as one of the principal industries. Lumbering is and will, for a long time, be a principal industry, but not to the point where it can supply lumber in quantities to Enid, Oklahoma, Terra Haute, Indiana, or other places as remote. Right now, some four or five hundred homes would be built almost in this immediate area, were lumber available in such quantities as people over the world have been lead to believe.

Residents good turn should be to tell your friends, those who plan location in this area: "Opportunity is here in untold amounts—there's no limit to the resources now untouched—but please do not expect to get a home soon, unless you can build immediately for yourself." Such would be much better than to left them become disappointed, once they arrived here.

Residents' good turn should be to tell your friends, those who the settler who wishes to locate somewhere than this immediate vicinity. However, people under-financed would have difficulty in locating here with comfort, when those who are so endowed, already here, have been unable to get many necessities, such as new houses, homes for rent, and even suitable building sites.

This area is virgin in almost any angle you care to view it. Development must be done, and certainly it takes people to do just that—but inform people who wish to come to a country for such opportunities of development. This area is no place for idlers.

Back your chamber of commerce in its endeavor to make the coming Azalea Festival the success which should be accord an event of this kind. This means that money will have to be raised—your committee will call on you soon—be prepared to give.

Brookings will be no better than people here make it—patronize Brookings whenever you can buy it here.
