

More Members Needed To Aid In Area Climb

Developments Coming Rapidly And Ideas Are Needed, Too

With events shaping up as they are, Brookings and the entire area make more and more demands on the local chamber of commerce. This body, a clearing house for ideas for the good of the community, needs more and more members.

The coming Azalea Festival is a good example of need for community-wide co-operation. Many, this may be said of few, feel the chamber of commerce has its "fingers in too many pies" and the community should have an opportunity to help. Herein lies the greatest misunderstanding of the community. The chamber of commerce does not feel it wishes to hold the spotlight in everything.

Holding the chamber of commerce together today are a few like-minded men, whose desires are to make this a better community. They wish no praise, nor do they seek any—unless leadership demands such.

More members, representatives of every walk of life, are needed sorely needed—to aid in the community development, which, in the past year, has grown by leaps and bounds.

If one has difference with the chamber's ideas, the place and way to iron out these differences, is to join, and to make known these ideas. Maybe the chamber would grab at new ideas immediately.

Since is your community as well as any other person's it is up to your right and privilege to help shape its future—which is easily done by joining a group hoping to do just that.

Shaves And Haircuts Hiked In Price Here

"Shave and a haircut, six bits"—that's a memory, just like the quartet favorites, "Sweet Adeline" and "Mother Machree."

This week, long after all the barbers over the country had raised their prices the last time, Lloyd Stefani has hiked his up to the new level: $1.00 for a haircut and 75c for a shave.

Fishing Gossip

By J. J. Gallagher

Good fishing reports have been coming in this past week.

Fishing on the Chetco is the best so far this year, with reports of catches of silver-sides and big trout. One nimrod stated he caught a 10-lb. silver-side and a two-pound trout over the past week-end.

Ling cod and other surf fish are being taken off the rocks.

Clam diggers have been active the past week, taking a large number of butter clams.

According to the tide tables, another good four days of clam tides will be coming up, May 15 to 19.

Newspapers Help Keep Ore. Green

Further pointing to the need for a vigorous forest fire prevention campaign this summer, with fire hazard increased due to the greatly stepped up tourist travel through Oregon, Gov. Earl Snell recently cited Keep Oregon Green work as a vital service for all citizens.

Governor Snell called upon nine newspaper men, officers and directors of the Oregon Newspaper Publishers' Association, to act as a spearhead committee to carry into every city and town through the state's newspapers.

"In the five years since the founding of Keep Oregon Green in 1941, newspapers of this state, have given magnificent support," this constant attack by editors and reporters against man-made fires has been so successful that nation-wide attention has been attracted by our work. By cutting forest and range fires to an all-time low, our national resources have been saved; jobs have been protected; and continuing payrolls have been insured.

Named to the Keep Oregon Green committee are: Tom B. Purcell of Gresham Outlook, the president; Charles A. Sprague, Oregon Statesman, vice-president; G. G. Crawford, Heppner Gazette-Times, treasurer; and Carl Webb, Eugene, secretary. All are officers of the publishers' association.

Adventist Raise Funds

The Seventh Day Adventist church, last Sabbath, collected $1065 for the famine relief drive.

The Dorcas Society of Adventist church had a supper and a musical program Sunday night, and proceeds, amounting to $65, also went into the same fund.

This is a total of $1130 raised by the Adventists in Brookings.
