PUC Will Help Veterans Start

Veterans planning to enter the taxi or motor freight hauling business in Oregon will find it easier to obtain permits if they first familiarize themselves with the state "common carrier" regulations before applying. This was the advice given this week by public utilities commission officials to Hugh E. Rosson, state department of veterans affairs director.

Generally speaking, existing carriers are "sympathetic" toward veterans entering this business, according to A. F. Harvey, superintendent of motor transport for the PUC. But the first thing the veteran should know, Harvey said, is that the motor transportation act requires that he show his business will not impair the ability of existing carriers to adequately serve the public and will not be contrary to public interest.

By consulting with public utilities commission officials beforehand, the veteran can receive advice which may prove helpful to him in avoiding "pitfalls" when he goes up for the hearing on his application to operate, Harvey told Rosson.

One veteran in John Day was turned down on his application, Harvey relates, because of his lack of "competent testimony" to show the need for his projected freight line. He then consulted PUC officials, who advised him to prepare his case thoroughly for the next hearing. He did this, and when he appeared at a later hearing his application was approved because he had a considerable number of shippers present to testify in his behalf, Harvey avers.

Application for permits should be made to George H. Flagg, public utilities commissioner, Salem. However, personal assistance will be given at any of the six branch offices in the state. These are located at Portland in the Oregon building; Eugene, Miner building; Medford, Liberty building; Klamath Falls, 619 Pine St.; Coos Bay, Hall building; and Ontario at the city hall.

Hearing are assigned frequently at various points in Oregon, making it necessary for applications to travel to Salem or Portland. Applicants will be notified when and where to appear, according to Harvey.

Rod & Gun Club Met Tuesday Eve

The Chetco Rod and Gun Club held its monthly meeting at the Harbor Grange hall, Tuesday evening.

Rules were made for the annual fishing derbies, including the trout derby, steelhead and salmon. In answer to the call of the organized sportsmen clubs over Oregon, the local club decided to support H. B. 357, at the November election. This bill makes it illegal to have in possession five or more steelhead at any one time. The purpose of the bill is to stop the transportation of illegally caught steelhead for commercial purposes.

This bill is of particular interest to Curry county because of the excellent steelhead fishing that can be had in the rivers of this area but which can be ruined by a few selfish outlaw netters.

The game club also discussed plans for another gun shoot to be held, probably next month.

It was decided to have a ladies night at the June meeting, to which each member will bring his wife. Dancing, moving pictures of Ken Taylor's boat trip down the Middle Fork of the Salmon, and Snake River, and east will feature the evening. A chili feed was served following the business.

School News

By Larrie Robinson

The school was given a beach party by the Baptist church Friday night at the mouth of the river. The party was well attended and all had fun.

This week is exams—and all classes are studying for the finals.

Sunday there will be a party given for the seniors by the frosh. The whole student body is invited. It will be at Bruce Hole's home at 2:00 p. m.

Monday the sophomores are giving a party for the student body. It will be at the Second Summer Bridge. The bus will leave the school at 11 in the morning.

Wednesday at the school will be a pot luck dinner, or picnic, for school and parents, and all care to come. It starts at 12 noon.

Mrs. Levitt Horner is having her music recital Friday night at the school. Everyone is welcome.

The eighth grade graduation is set for Friday afternoon. Everyone is urged to come.

Commencement will be held Tuesday night at the gym.

Ethel Pierce and Merle Baumgardner went to Crescent City Tuesday morning and spent the day shopping.

The last day of school is rolling around and the girls and boys are getting restless. Lockers and the rooms are getting emptied.

club flower show will be viewed. The queen and her court will be present at all occasions.

Failure of a few members to aid in the matter, the Altar Society called off its scheduled dinner for 6:30 p. m. at the Odd Fellows hall. Effort is being made to enlist other organizations in this project, or a combination of groups.

With unprecedented crowds expected, it was suggested that the people of the area, who have a place where they could permit people to sleep, to register these at the Pilot office, in case some people are stranded due to bus schedules or transportation.

The Legion post, it is reported, will conduct a hot dog stand for lunches. Restaurants expect to be busy the entire day.

More and complete details of the occasion will be seen on the printed programs, and in next issue of the Pilot.
