Mrs. Lawrence Payne and son, Kenny, were visitors for a couple of days at the Herbert Payne home, the latter part of the week. Saturday they accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Payne to Cave Junction where they are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Leming. Mr. and Mrs. Payne returned home Sunday evening, and said it was so hot it melted the patches from their tubes and that they were stranded on top of Oregon mountain Saturday afternoon for six hours during the hottest part of the day.

At the Grange meeting, Friday evening, Marion Nance, district forest ranger, who is stationed at Gold Beach, gave an interesting talk on the proposed natural reserve for upper Chetco country, to preserve the rare shrub, Kalmiopsis Leachiana. He said that there was no chance of any cross-country route going through this area, as it is one of the most primitive, broken parts of the mountains. The cross-country roads were planned and charted on the maps years ago, and that none come near this area. He also stated that if it were ever desirable that a primitive reserve like this could be returned to its original status by the same methods as such an area is set aside in the first place. After he gave this information, which was backed up by local people, who know the country, about which he was talking, no action was taken by the Grange. The sentiment is that such a reserve would, in no way, bar the much-desired all-Oregon road to the Illinois river valley.

Mrs. Anna Marie Hamalainen and son left the latter part of the week for Klamath Falls after receiving word from her husband that he had landed in New York from Europe, and had now received his discharge from the army. They have been living here with Mrs. Hamalainen's sister, Mrs. Birger Dahlstrom and family for the past few months.
