

Area Experiences Its Coldest Months

This locality is now experiencing its coldest period of the year. August and September, paradoxically, bring with them lower average temperatures than any of the other months.

This is caused by lack of sunshine and proximity to the ocean currents with ground fogs at night, and an overcast but few hundred feet high during the daytime, together with moisture-heavy airs both day and night. While most other portions of the country record usual high summer temperatures, this small area is experiencing weather upon which is based the slogan of the Coast highway, being naturally air-conditioned. Folks already acclimated go about with no change in apparel but others, coming to the coast from as near as Kerby and Cave Junction, quickly put on another layer or two of clothing to keep warm until they get used to the cooler weather.

Son of Founder Reads Story of Brookings

According to Mrs. W. H. Hibbard, the manuscript for the forthcoming story The Romance of Brookings is now in the hands of Walter Brookings, son of J. E. Brookings the founder of Brookings. He is the only living Brookings who was identified with the company at the time of the building of Brookings and he is giving first hand and highly authentic information concerning old mill days. Mrs. Hibbard has been in Correspondence with Mr. Brookings since beginning her story and he has shown a keen interest in every detail of its progress. Mr. Brookings lives at Alexandria, Virginia. So When the book does appear it will give its readers facts that are undisputed and they are told in a dramatic manner with a distinct thread of interest running through its colorful pages.
