Who Has The Correct Version?

Henry A. Wallace, late secretary of commerce, once a vice-president, and the former secretary of agriculture, who taught the economy of scarcity, must have spoken out of turn. Anyway, today, Henry Wallace is an "ex" in all these jobs because he told a few things about official Washington.

Commentaries on radio programs seemed about equally divided on the question of "Wallace" or "Truman," which seems to make the general public realize all the more that official Washington has been hiding something. This rift between the president and his former cabinet member, by the way, doesn't confine itself to the Democratic party, as the Republicans have taken up both sides of the issue.

Because of this rift, Truman will find it difficult to obtain the nomination for presidency again, if he wants the job. On the other hand, Wallace, who never has been too popular in political ranks, has dropped to a new low, unless the "revelations" which he promises, have merit.

To look at the national picture from another angle, the Republican party has offered no leadership for 1948, which looks anything better than has been offered in the past 16 years. Stassen, of Minnesota, is the only hope of G. O. P., and he is too "liberal" for most of that party to tolerate.

With return of ex-soldiers and ex-sailors, time seems about ripe for formation of a new party, which, unless it can obtain a majority from dissatisfied people of both parties, may prove a failure as it did in 1912 when Theodore Roosevelt bolted the Republicans.

Day by day, it seems the world is getting nearer the verge of socialism, and today this nation, alone, is an alleged democracy.

Your vote for directors of Coos Electric Coop may mean your earlier realization of electric power this area. Port Orford and this area are entitled to two directors each—be sure to cast your ballot just that way. Mail your votes promptly, the very day you receive these in the mail.

There were quite a few fishermen on the Chetco Sunday, but the only one who caught his limit was Capt. Victor Reynolds, who got three silversides. Their house guests, Deputy County Recorder of Los Angeles County and Mrs. Frank Daley, arrived just in time to enjoy eating broiled salmon that evening, and were given one to be packed in dry ice to take home. They had been on a trip to Yellowstone National Park, and the Pendleton Roundup and were en route home.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey N. Cegavskne returned to their home at Alhambra, Calif., after visiting Lew Frazier for a week.

Mrs. Polly Schroeder arrived from Klamath Falls and will remain until their bulbs are harvested and replanted.
