Your Vote Means Something Now

People who like to stand on the sidelines and criticize, should act instead—it'd go farther toward realizing their goal. Reference is made to the Co-op Electric Coop annual meeting, billed for this Saturday at Coquille.

The future of Brookings depends largely upon her power resources. To realize more power, people must take more of an active part in furthering the source of local power—the co-op. Nothing could ever be gained except by getting a shoulder to the wheel.

While nothing definite can be published at this moment, it is known that Bonneville power will soon come west of the mountains and to southwest Oregon. Bonneville power, when it comes, will solve all problems, but until such time, people of the area must do with what they have, and do with it in the manner which will bring best results.

If you can't be present at the annual meeting at Coquille, at least you can send in your vote—you can still use your right of a citizen—name your board of directors who will work in your interests.

Have you done that duty—then do it today!

Watch your chimneys, people who use oil stoves! Be certain your fire is right before you leave it, unless you know that your chimney has been cleaned. Serious results may be expected from clogged flues.

The P.-T. A. meeting, tonight, holds something for every citizen of this community. Attend!

Lilies are precious—don't sacrifice your labors!
