Tourist Suffers A Stroke, Tuesday

Moe Ettinson, of Leavenworth, Kansas, while enjoying breakfast at the Grayshel restaurant, Tuesday morning, suffered a paralytic stroke and was rushed to Seaside hospital by Dr. A. O. Schmitt, who was summoned.

Mr. and Mrs. Ettinson arrived in town Monday evening, and at the restaurant, began talking to H. W. Kretzmeier, whom they asked if they could get a room because they did not wish to drive on in the fog that evening. Mr. Kretzmeier took them to the Young Hotel. In appreciation, the Ettinsons asked Mr. Kretzmeier to breakfast.

During Breakfast, Mr. Ettinson attracted Mr. Kretzmeier's attention when, all of a sudden, his elbow brushed a plate from the table. He couldn't talk except in mumbling tones, and Mr. Kretzmeier summoned Dr. A. O. Schmitt.

Mr. and Mrs. Ettinson, retired merchants, were on an extended auto trip, the first they had ever had. They had traveled through Canada, and all scenic spots of their fancy before coming here. They were en route south, expecting to see many spots in California.
