BLUEPRINT OF Progress

Orville Evenrude, Central Office Equipment Installer, whose skill has helped build a telephone system from blueprint to completion.

Truly you will see a seventh wonder of the world at the Telephone Central Office where cable lines converge from the outside and messages are routed to their destination. Complex distribution frames, relays which seem to act with almost human intelligence, and switching apparatus are all integrated into a system which makes it possible for you to call a friend in Europe as readily as someone a mile away.

The wondrous complexity of the Telephone Central Office spells fast efficient communication service.
