

Pinther Talks On Discipline, P.-T. A.

A child is born with nine physiological motives. These all have to do with their bodily needs. There is no mysterious instinct that prompts children to love and obey their parents! These, they must be taught. If a child does not obey at home, can he be expected to at school? This being the case, leaves the entire job of moral training up to the school.

Another breakdown is misplaced sympathy! Did your boy ever come home with a black eye, or maybe some scratch. In a case of this kind, I advise you to take a little inventory, maybe he had it coming, usually he does. Perhaps a little good natured kidding will make him see it. Or, do you listen to their big fabricated tale of woe, and sympathize and maybe go see the other kid's mother and start a neighborhood fuss. Perhaps your child's report card doesn't seem all satisfactory to you. Perhaps you feel that some grade is unjust, if you do, please don't let the child know. A report card is an instrument by which the progress of your child is measured. This report is made out by his teachers, and we want you to come to us if you feel that a mistake has been made, and believe me, we make mistakes! I believe the most important grade on that report card is the one in citizenship or deportment. An unadjusted child can cause a lot of harm, cause many heartaches, and the child whose parents are forever taking his side is an unadjusted child. That child must be made to realize that he has made a mistake and has been punished for that mistake! You cannot fight your child's battles for all of his life, sooner or later he has to stand on his own feet. The older he is when this adjustment is made, the harder it is on him and everyone around.

Now let us see why it is necessary to have discipline in the school. First we should consider the aim of our school. Let us state that aim in this manner: We want our children to become articulate, self-disciplined, reasonable, informed and responsible human being. We cannot spend all our time teaching a youngster things he should have learned in babyhood. The time to begin teaching a youngster politeness and consideration for others is in the home when they are little tots, not when they enter high school. We cannot teach a class room full of children who are all carrying on their own private conversations, throwing spitwads, poking each other with pencils, or wandering aimlessly around the room.

How can we as parents and teachers work more closely together?

Each child has a very separate list of things that are of interest to him. Let's find out what their interests are. If your child is interested in Say, chemistry, there are many good sets on the market today. If he enjoys building things, get him a set of tools. I have never yet seen a boy or girl who wasn't completely fascinated with a lathe.

Don't just get the stuff and tell him "There it is, get busy". Talk it up before hand. Look at the catalogues, ask the child's advice. Remember that a lot of pleasure is derived from anticipation. You have all heard the joke about the electric train that father bought for the boy. Really though, your child will get a great thrill from something if Mother and Dad enter into the fun. It is music to my ears when a boy in school starts to tell me something he did over the weekend and he begins by saying "Dad and I —".

That Dad is that boy's ideal. J. Edgar Hoover says, "No youth ever developed a heroic ideal that was not first centered about some adult. When the youngster begins to show disrespect for law and order, you can be sure he learned something of that attitude at home, or he was not taught to recognize the right from the wrong so that he could make his own decisions."

The instilling of habits of obedience calls for patience, tact, and love. If a child is obedient and respectful to his parents, he will be upright in his realings and association with his fellow men. Adequate home training involves a responsibility on the part of the parents that many are unwilling to assume. Not all the blame for tragic lack of obedience in the home can be laid on rebellious children. If they rebel, you can rest assured that you as a parent are slipping. We cannot do it all in the school, but we will do our level best to cooperate with you 100%. And remember, that the most important work any of us will ever do is to care for our children.

Mr. and Mrs. Pinson Move to Gold Beach

Larry Pinson, who for several years has been manager of Henry Rosaker interests here, has severed connections with that concern and with Mrs. Pinson is moving to his farm near Gold Beach.

Dan Kelleher, who has been employed by the concern for a time will have charge until arrival of Mr. Rosaker, who is expected here shortly.

Deveny Agency Reports Several Realty Sales

Recent realty sales, involving local property has been reported by the Wm. E. Deveny agency, and includes:

The A. E. Freeman house to Clarence Campbell, operator of the Woodworth sawmill. They plan remodeling of the place. Mr. Campbell also bought the Cecil Hamilton timber tract up the Chetco.

Osa Johnson sold some of her acreage, near the C. A. McKenzie home to L. H. Trosper of San Francisco, who plans the erection of a motel unit there early this year.

Grant Powell sold acreage across the highway from his home near the Winchuck, to J. H. Sanders and Ethel Paul of Winchester Bay, who expect to build on the property, and will start an antique shop as soon as possible.

Norton LeBrook, employed by Brimm Bros. Mill, purchased the Fred Gustafson home, near the Odd Fellows hall, now occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Stan Patterson.

James Norris of San Francisco purchased a tract of the Osa Johnson acreage, north of town and expects to erect a home soon. He is a painting contractor.

E. B. Livingstone of Los Angeles, and Dica Baitey have joined the Deveny agency, and will have charge of the California offices, it is reported.
