Editor, Pilot:

Accidents wont wait for our new ambulance to arrive as was the case Wednesday when a small car rushed into town bringing Everett Jagers, whose foot was badly crushed by a rolling log. The only thing available to take this man to the hospital was Wilson Freeman's car, which was very uncomfortable for the injured man as he was in intense pain and had to hold his foot in an upright position. X-Rays showed a badly bruised ankle, which will take some time to recover. This is only one instance where the ambulance is needed, and I hope this will open the eyes of the people in the community. Let's get behind this drive and put it over.—Wilson Freeman.

Editor, Pilot:

Should further demonstration of the community's need for ambulance service be required, consider the cases arising in the past two weeks. One of our neighbors hurt his back so severely he couldn't get up from where he fell. He was rolled onto a door and carried from the scene, later to be slid onto the bed of a pickup to be taken to Crescent City where he is advised that hospitalization will be long and expensive. Whether this could have been lessened, whether his injury could have been more humanely handled depends on you putting yourself in his or his family's position. The patient, Bert DeMoss, not yet a year out of hospitals because of serious burns in a truck wreck, would probably tell you that a ride in a comfortable ambulance would have been more appropriate for an injured man, though thankful for what actually was done for him.

Next, a severely disabled veteran, Everette Jagers, out trying to make better of a poor situation, suffered severe leg injuries when a log fell on him out in the woods. Packed to a road, he was loaded, bent up as was required, into a passenger car, and thence to a hospital. It would certainly seem that his broken and bruised condition wasn't improved any by the experience.

Possibly before this is set into type, or before the ambulance dance, to be held in the Grange hall, the evening of March 17th, you yourself, or someone of your family, at least, possibly one of your neighbors, will stand in immediate need of skilled attendance and humane transportation to where they can get that much sooner mend and return to circulation. Would you like to start your journey on an old discarded door, in the bed of a bouncing pickup, bent into whatever sort of a condition, or would you rather be attended by competent sympathetic first-aid men and women, and made as comfortable as humanly possible in a suitable ambulance? There's a splendid chance, right now, of expressing how much such assistance is worth to you—YOU!—Ambulance Committee, I.O.O.F.
