

Smith River Man Loses Two Pigs To Butchering Thieves

SMITH RIVER — No clue has been found by Frank Evans, who the thieves were that made away with two pigs recently. Evans purchased five pigs about three months old and were penned near the Richard home, on Rowdy Creek road. When Evans went up to feed the pigs next morning, two were gone, and plenty of blood stains where the pigs had been killed in the pen. Tire tracks were plain where a car had been driven close to the pen. Richards were not home that night so could not give any information.

of July, our minds will be in a more serious condition than possibly at any time since the birth of our nation. This is because the world faces one of the greatest crises in all human history, and America is the only hope of the world in this international crisis, her course will probably determine the future welfare and the very existence of civilization.

Let us look to God in this tragic hour for that Divine guidance essential to direct our beloved nation aright. Special services will be held at the Smith River church as in all other communities, and we hope that all of our people and organizations having for their objective the welfare of our country, will assemble in their various churches to thank God for His preservation of our nation and pray for His continued guidance of it so that order may be established out of chaos, prosperity out of want and famine and that the desire of nations may be for peace instead of war.

This Fourth, coming on the Sabbath day, gives us an opportunity to follow the ideals of our forefathers and dedicate anew ourselves to the principles of democracy. It seems this should not be a day of celebrating the death of our fallen who purchased with their blood and preserved with it our freedom, but a day of consecrating ourselves to the principles for which they died. Attend services somewhere on this day of Worship, July 4.

"Homemakers"

HELLO, THERE:

"Home again! and it's good to be home! I'm sure all of our 4-H Summer School delegates will agree that nice as it was to go—it's even nicer to come home. It gives one a satisfying feeling to see new places, gain new knowledge and make new friends then to come back and share all these new experiences with the family and friends who stayed at home. For 4-H leaders and staff members, summer school is hard work, but it's worth all that was put into it—and much more.

Now that we are home it is time to work on 4-H project completions and to plan for the county fair. I hope all 4-H clubs will plan at least one picnic this summer. Recreation is just as important to successful 4-H clubs as it is the project. For true happiness we must learn to have a good balance of play and work throughout our lives.

I did remember the adult work while at 4-H summer school. You remember that your delegates to program planning day voted to include "Making a Winter Garden" in the home extension program. Mr. Knox and I had a conference with Ralph Clark, extension horticulturist and planned for those meetings. The earliest possible time for the meeting is the first week in August. You will hear more about this during July. It seems that we on the southern Oregon coast are especially fortunate. Our home gardens can be planned so as to produce fresh vegetables for family meals every month of the year. If this fact interests you, watch for announcements of place and date of the winter garden meeting.

Have a happy and safe Fourth of July, with just a little time out to be thankful to those who gained independence for our nation as well as to those through the years who have preserved this independence—then back to the picnics and fireworks—the Fourth is truly a day to celebrate.
