MADALENE N. ROBERTS
Demonstration Agent

There is a wonderful country in the United States. As our differences may be election day, we are united like a big, loyal family. Soon as the "contest" is over, we are fortunate people—we always use the good things necessary to keep our home free.

repaired five innerspring mattresses at Port Orford last Friday. Miss Mary Beth Minden, management specialist, of the State College, conducted the meeting Friday. Thirty women were present to see the method of repair.

We are always glad to have husbands attend our meetings. The program is of interest to them. One cushion was especially bad—when we ripped it out it looked like a rat's nest. After evening it was smooth, flat and springy, as when new. We have this same program in our community, and everyone is invited to attend—with or without a cushion.

Something has been added to our home extension unit meetings. Those women who attended the project leader training meeting for gift wrapping and party favors will give the information to the units in 15 minute demonstrations at each unit meeting. Mrs. Etheleene Thompson and Mrs. Pauline Anderson demonstrated at Langlois.

Mrs. Dorothy Timeus and Mrs. Vida Walker at Pistol River. Mrs. Dorothy Asdel and Mrs. Troxel at Port Orford. Other unit meetings have not been held. This part of the extension program is a bit like the frosting of a cake—not essential—but oh! so good.

Did you know that when cooking potatoes, the easy way is the best way? How do you cook potatoes? Many rural women in California were asked this question.

I wonder whether Oregon women top California in potato cooking skill. Three-fourths of the California women who answered said that they peel and cut up the potatoes before cooking.

Recent research shows that it is best to boil or bake them in their skins. This method saves the minerals and vitamins.

Boiling potatoes in their jackets—when potatoes and jackets are sound—is a good start toward serving them scalloped, mashed, creamed, or in other ways that are family favorites. Peeling after cooking is a quick task.

Do You Have Trouble Peeling Hard-Boiled Eggs?

There have been so many questions about how to peel hard-boiled eggs that the department of agriculture in Washington has prepared directions for peeling them. These directions will make the job easier if you want to use cold hard-cooked eggs in potato salad or for stuffed eggs.

This is the way that is suggested: As soon as the eggs are cooked, cool them immediately in cold water. That quick, thorough cooling helps to prevent the dark ring around the yolks, and makes handling easier. Then crack the shell as usual. Here is a point that may be new to you. Loosen the shell by rolling the egg lightly between the two hands. Don't overdo it. Then, hold the egg under water and begin peeling at the large end at the air space. The cold water helps ease off the shell and washes away the bits of shell left on the whites.

So you're driving to California

We hope you have a pleasant trip, with a minimum of slippery highways, road hogs, and unsolicited advice from the back seat on how to drive, where to stop for meals, and where to spend the night.

Of course, you might be a bit more comfortable if you went by train and let the engineer do the work. You'd arrive rested, instead of tired out. And you'd avoid those persistent "Next time, try the train" billboards which (we warn you) will make you wish you'd taken their advice in the first place.

It doesn't cost a great deal to go to California on the train. Why not call Southern Pacific and get the dope—just in case?

P.S. If you need a car when you get there, you can rent a good one at low rates. We'll gladly arrange it for you.
