The Man Who Really Carries the Burden

The Christian Science Monitor
Printed in U.S.A.

He is married and has two small boys. The Bishop of Oregon hopes to send a new vicar soon to take his place. In the meantime the Rt. Rev. Thomas Jenkins, retired bishop of Nevada, will carry on the regular services. Beginning June 5, the hour of morning worship for St. Timothy, Brookings, will be at 11 a. m.

Mr. Dam, who even in his unfinished sketches, can get complete expression. However he has promised the art committee that with the completion of his new studio, he is really going to work this year. In addition to this we have threatened to perpetuate our own brand of horrific surrealism on canvas and sign his name to it

Along Azalea Row

From all reports Azalea Garden Club is winding up its year with a feeling of accomplishment in the success of the big annual flower show and art exhibit. It was a revelation to see the avid interest of the national council delegates (our guests) in our show and the many different flowers we have here with which they were not familiar. The delegate in charge of getting them all back on their respective buses had difficulty tearing them away from the hall.

This year we had a very extensive 'showing' from the school children and their children as well as Mrs. Garcia, their art teacher, Mrs. Mathews and Mrs. Dotson, under chairmanship of Mrs. Becker, are to be congratulated on the results. Herb Goldberg, who in his teaching of musical appreciation to the school children in our neighboring county to the south, has correlated this with graphic art, gave us an interesting exhibit of these children's interpretation of musical composition. The interest in this "guest exhibit" by the school children here in Brookings and their teachers as well as the visitors should warm the cockles of the heart of this fine artist and thoughtful man, Mr. Goldberg.

In our adult art exhibit we had some new faces this year. Sidney Armer with his beautiful and almost startling realism in his exhibition of flower painting—a lovely feeling for flowers beside superb draftsmanship. Mr. Armer is called the Audubon of the Flower World, he might rightfully be called "the Michael Angelo" of flowers.

Mrs. Pernot Duff with her lovely oils and water colors in an extensive exhibit was also new. Her lovely "Let There Be Light," of late evening mood was the sensation of the exhibit. We are most fortunate that this fine artist has chosen to live among us, bringing us her fine talents to the ever-growing sum of capabilities of this community.

C. W. Dam and Katherine Hardesty, our old stand-bys, were there again to the delight of all. Something have been stealing too much time from that fine artist, if we won't find him busy with that fine academic background and his sure and well-known talents. This should really alarm him!

Mrs. Lottie Gardner, at one time a resident of this community, was also new on the walls at the flower show this year—nice treatment of the redwoods. These were exhibited above the splendid redwoods and myrtlewoods conservation exhibit of Maudee Luck and Mina Christiansen. Also two interesting "marines."

Missed this year were many of Smith River painters. Connie Luck says she is in an "mutation" cycle. However, we had two lovely works from the hand of Mrs. VanZee.

All in all it was a splendid exhibit and Dorothy Lockland, in charge of the flower show this year, should be feeling very good indeed. Also taking bows should be Lillian Weideman and her committee for their prodigious job in the tea room, Katherine Hardesty and her committee who gave us that lovely stage setting, Ella Rogers on decoration and properties.

The smoothness and co-operation of this committee was most notable—the Azalea Singers and Nell MacKenzie who directed the group in preparation and got up from the sick bed, as the saying goes, to be with them at their telling performance at the show, Cornelia Ackley and her plant sale committee—the many who lent themselves as receptionists, cashiers etc. Rose Baumgarten and Dorothy Harroun for their splendid help on the art committee. Over all the eagle eye of the president, Mrs. Guy Rice, and lending considerable muscle work as well as cerebral. Mrs. Rice was particularly pleased with the work and interest shown by the children this year and that of their teachers. Mrs. Rice and Mrs. Lockland, both, wish us to convey their sincere appreciation to all who contributed to the success of the flower show and art exhibit this year.

Card of Thanks

On behalf of the Azalea Garden Club, we wish to express our appreciation and gratitude for the co-operation and support given to the 1949 Azalea Festival Flower and Art Show. Our visitors were amazed and delighted with the beauty and scope of the show, and asked how it could possibly be accomplished by one garden club in this small town. The answer, of course, is the spirit of the community as a whole, was expressed in this exhibit of beauty in the show; the theme of which was: honoring our native wild azaleas and the grandeur of our coast.

ERMA RICE, President.
DOROTHY LOCKLAND,
Chairman of show.
