IT SEEMS TO ME:

By Dewey

Curry county has, in the next year or so, a chance to make itself famous the world over. This random statement is meant to induce readers to look about for opportunities to exploit the last frontier of the United States and to form a closer co-operation to accomplish this fact. First opportunity is the Curry County fair, which, up to this point, is drawing little attention—even at the seat of its showing—at Gold Beach.

There are several big name dairymen in this county, and it has been found out that their interest is only a slight degree up from the zero mark. The Pilot would like to ask why, but for the momens will keep still about the matter. Individually there is considerable interest, but to the Pilot, there seems to be indifference among the people whom it would help immensely.

The second opportunity this county has to become noted is by exploiting its flowers, especially those which bloom here in the winter time, and which the markets all over the country seek along in December, January and February. The vehicle to exploit this attraction of the county is by way of a flower festival—say the lily parade, as has been carried on in this community the past three years.

Two weeks ago, the Pilot told what people living in the Rocky Mountain region would do to see flowers as may be seen here. This must not have hit a happy note in the mind of some reader for he clipped out the article, printed across it "Azaleas and Lilies Stink." The Pilot wonders how anyone could be so disgruntled with life that they'd care to go on living.

After having catalogued mistakes of the past three parades, but at the same time realizing the value of this show, a group in the area are going ahead, almost a ear in advance, to plan the 1950 parade with an idea of making it not only bigger, but better known all over the west—if not the world.

Such problems as length of parade, distance between floats, and arrangement of entries have solution in the minds of those who plan to start working toward the next parade, some time next summer, when lilies are at their best. An effort is being planned to interest other communities in this project to make the magnitude that much longer.

Of the estimated 12,000 people who saw the 1949 parade, nothing but praise has been heard. So intense was the interest that many spent the night in this vicinity to look, the next day, at the lily fields and at the opportunities offered to prospective investments.

People from Texas, who spent several days here after the parade, when they arrived too late to see it, made a complete tour of almost every passable road for their car. They were so impressed that they left their addresses that next year they may be notified so they could make it here on time.

For something to think about, read "Along Azalea Row" this week—learn how vandalism has done much havoc at Loeb State park—and it hasn't been dedicated one month as yet. Doesn't it make you proud of some of the citizens?

From the story I get, it seems someone deliberately backed a car or truck into the fireplace, badly damaging it. A bench is missing. Could it be that the people were too lazy to go out and pick up their wood along the river bank? Does this country need a Gestapo to watch every action of all its citizens?

Among citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamor, and evil speaking, be put away from you, with all malice" (Eph. 4:31), together with the following correlative passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Love one another" (I John 3:23) is the most simple and profound counsel of the inspired writer" (page 572).
